PURPLE THREAD are back with their hotly anticipated single 'Gimme More', due for release 28th January 2022. After an enforced COVID hiatus, the gradual ascent of PURPLE THREAD back to the indie-rock universe is currently underway. Having already returned to the live scene with a bang playing a sold-out Halloween show and supporting The Luka State on The Leeds leg of their European tour, the band are now set to release their third single on Monomyth Records. The new track is an intoxicating, unrelenting and fist-pumping anthem that leaves you gasping for more.

"Gimme More" is carried along on a tide of yearning energy, a song destined to be a live favourite. Excess, self-destruction and heartache run heavy through the song - all brought together by a fierce tongue-in-cheek attitude. Raucous, grit-heavy guitars, pulsating bass and thunderous live drums provide the ideal hedonistic backdrop to the track.

Lead singer Liz Mann says; "Gimme More" tells a story of learning to navigate our tumultuous, multi-layered inner worlds and the total loss of control. The constant pursuit of pleasure becomes nothing more than a flickering flame which is never truly satisfied. There's a chaos in the song which threatens to fall apart at any minute but instead penetrates right into the heart. It's the first song we wrote together after many months forced apart. Taking such a long, unexpected break has seen us all grow as both a band and individuals which aided in the process of bringing this song into being.

"The band leave you wanting more but only once you've had a chance to catch your breath and maybe a bit of a sit down."

"Sometimes you can hear a record and know the band behind it are going to be big."
