Despite only playing their first gig last year, VENUS are releasing their third piece of music which is packed with the biggest dynamic range of the band's abilities so far. Theming it around Halloween, they also play Leeds' Oporto on the same night (31.10.19) to celebrate the release and kick off their Freaky Friday Tour (read more).

Lead singer GK, says 'Freaky Friday is the most emotionally bearing and intimate song we've released. Not even just lyrically, but musically, we wanted each member of the band to have their own moment within the song and express their anguish. I wrote the lyrics in this to not only comfort myself, but to liberate others from toxic variants in their lives. Not necessarily romantic, but in friendship, families and in socio-political contexts, because toxicity comes in all forms and in different ways. Take solace in that pain is temporary and those who have treated you with disrespect without any remorse, will know and realise their behaviour at some point in their lives, They're the ones who have to live with that, which for us is the ultimate form of closure.'

'It will not be long before they are both the figurehead for British female rock music and one day, British punk-rock.'
