'Smile While You Can' is a fresh, funky tune that carries a message about keeping a positive mental attitude when you experience disappointment or setbacks in your life - we want to demonstrate that you can still have fun in troubled times, even whilst maintaining a nihilistic outlook. Yeh, everything's a bit shit. Yeh, the world is literally on fire. What're you gonna do ey? When there's nothing left you've gotta smile while you can.

'If you haven't the foggiest idea what Flat Moon do - here's an introduction. But even this is difficult because defining the music they play is difficult. I find myself asking the question 'are they a jazz-rock band, a jazz-funk band, a band that's taking the concept of Nu-Soul to the very edge and beyond, a psychedelic funk band or even a progressive psychedelic jazz-funk band?', and I answer 'yes, all of the above'. Honest.

But there's more, there's pfunk, there's the out-there groove of Sly and The Family Stone and the strangeness, at times, of Frank Zappa. That's not to mention the warped sounds of Gong in jazz mode, and the manichness of Cardiacs and Shatner's Bassoon.

They are a band who are difficult to pin down; 'you're not kidding me' I hear you scream in frustration'.

(LOCAL SOUND FOCUS)

'By blending genres that could be viewed as dated, Flat Moon actually give us a fresh take on some classic sounds. If you're new to the band, they may take you by surprise.

But if you're tired of the same old - be sure to give this 'stormy psych-soul' outfit a whirl.
